Life is not always about quantity so much as it is about quality. The elderly people often lose the quality of their lives well before they face the end of their days. It's not enough just to see to their medical needs. We must also see to their mental and emotional needs in order to help them have a positive view of life. With the right support, treatment, and strategies, we can boost the way they feel, help them cope better with life's changes, and make their old years a healthy, happy, and enjoyable time. Try to encourage some regular physical activity. Walking, and physical therapy exercises can improve the circulation and perhaps blood flow, lower stress, and encourage heart health. Exercise also improves the quality of sleep, builds strength, and can relieve depression. Everyone also needs mental exercise. Elderly people need crossword puzzles, reading, writing, and other types of mental activity to retain or improve brain function and, also, to gain or maintain an overall sense of well - being. Feeling alone is common among older adults, especially if they are unable to walk or have memory problems. Help your aging senior to stay connected to family, friends, and community. Passage 2 Bilingual is a person who is able to speak two languages with the facility of a native speaker in everyday life. Only a few people whom we would call bilingual can speak, read or write both languages equally well. We call those who can do this "balanced bilinguals". But most bilinguals have a preferred language, which they use most of the time, and then a second language, the level and use of which will vary considerably from one person to another. Children raised bilingually from a very early age are most likely to have an equal command of both. There are bilingual communities in many parts of the world. Members of these communities use two (or more) languages as a matter of course. South Africa, Belgium, Wales, Ireland and Canada are some examples of countries where such communities exist. (This does not mean that everyone living in these countries is bilingual.) Bilingualism also occurs in other areas of the world where immigrant groups have settled but have remained not fully absorbed into the society around them. They keep up many of their own customs and continue to speak their own language at home. The following examples are taken from a long list: Chinese and Italians in Australia, Turkish migrant workers in Germany, Asians in Great Britain, and Spanish speakers in the United States. In many cases, the bilinguals are not themselves immigrants, but people whose parents or even grandparents, moved to the country in question and have continued to speak to their children in their own mother tongue.	14 1.5
