P. Passage one :

(3)

Read the following text and answer the questions.

Psychology is generally defined as the science of behavior and mental processes and the application of the resulting findings to the solution of problems. Psychology differs from sociology, in part, by studying the behavior of individuals rather than the behavior of the groups themselves. The root of the word psychology (psyche) means “soul” or “spirit” in Greek, and psychology was sometimes considered a study of the soul in a religious sense of this term.

The first person to call himself a “psychologist”, Wilhelm Wundt, opened the first psychological laboratory in 1879. Until about the end of the 19 century, psychology was regarded as a branch of philosophy. With the work of Wundt and William James, the field of psychology was slowly established as a science independent of philosophy. Few universities, journals, or researchers today treat psychology as a branch of philosophy, but there is much disagreement as to whether it should be considered an experimental science.

Today psychologists work in cooperation, and sometimes in competition, with psychiatrists who are medical doctors specializing in mental health issues.

Read the following text and answer the questions.

Nobody knows how long it is possible for a human being to live. Although hundreds of people have claimed to be 150 or more, the greatest certain age to which any human has lived is 120 years 237 days. Shigechiyo Izumi of Japan was born on 29 June 1865 and died on 21 February 1986. The number of people living to be more than 100 has increased: of these most are woman.

Many people live to be fairly old, over 80, and then some essential part of their bodies, such as the heart, gives way and death follows. Many others, however, die younger from hunger, disease or accidents.

The number of years a human being may expect to live on average is called his or her expectation of life. "On average" takes account of those who die in childhood as well as the people who live to be old. Women usually live longer than men.

Before ways of preventing or curing disease were known, the expectation of life was not long, even in rich countries. At the end of the 18th century the expectation of life at birth in northwestern Europe and North America was 35 to 40 years. By 1970 it was more than 70 years.

Yet in spite of modern knowledge babies born in many developing countries have an expectation of life of less than 40 years. Some starve, many are weakened by poor diet, and many die from outbreaks of illness caused by people living in crowded areas.
